A Voice for the Voiceless

For more than 54 years, The Atlanta Voice is proud to be Metropolitan Atlanta’s most widely read and highly respected African-American owned newspaper. As the largest audited African-American newspaper in Georgia, with over 450 distribution locations across the Metro Atlanta area, The Atlanta Voice is distributed free of charge at commercial outlets, newsstands and supermarket chains — we are the voice of urban Atlanta.

As the premiere African American-owned news weekly in the U.S., we are also masters of content. The Atlanta Voice possesses a combined monthly reach of 583,900, with a weekly in-print circulation of 17,700. Not only do we offer a variety of print publications that provide extended opportunities to engage our readers, we also maintain a robust digital footprint on various platforms, including an interactive, mobile-responsive website, that both expands and enhances our reach in real time.

Why We Matter

• The nations African-American buying power rose to $1.3 million in 2018.
• The nations share of total African-American buying power surpassed 8.7 percent of all consumer groups in 2018.
• In the Atlanta metropolitan area alone, those gains represent upwards of $58 million in annual revenue.
• African-Americans continue to become more highly educated and are entering the marketplace with higher average salaries.

The Convergent Approach

Niche and alternative newspapers are the one sector of the multimedia landscape that is thriving.

Much of our success can be traced to the appeal ‘alternative’ newspapers possess for credibility that mainstream media lacks, i.e. local significance and addressing relevant issues, all from a perspective that readers can readily relate to.

Additionally, The Atlanta Voice has gone digital. We offer a robust digital platform that both expands and enhances our footprint to reach our audience in real time, in an engaging, interactive space that puts the reader in control of content and its delivery.
